

Voters Expand Joplin Junior College District

Area voters approved the proposal to create a new junior college district in the balloting April 7 by a 3 to 1 margin with Joplin approving 8 to 1. The new board of trustees named in the election met the following day to discuss future plans and transfer of administration of Joplin Junior College.

Under the new organization, residents of Jasper County and portions of Barton, Lawrence, McDonald, and Newton counties will share expenses of the College; and all students in that area may attend without paying tuition fees, effective next term.

Six trustees were elected to the board from the Eastern and Western districts of Jasper County: Fred Hughes and L. B. Reynolds, Jr., of Joplin;

Thomas Taylor, Carthage; Norval Matthews, Webb City; Elvin Ummel, Jasper; and Gene Taylor, Sarcoxie.

During their first unofficial meeting, the board considered several items with President Roi S. Wood and Fred Davis, representative from the state board of education in Jefferson City. They included: the selection of a site for the new campus; financial resources for the new district; employment of an attorney and auditor; and methods of retaining the present J.J.C. faculty. The trustees will hold their organizational meeting Monday, during which time officers will be elected and the length of terms of various members determined.

The new trustees will meet with the Joplin Board of Directors Tuesday to discuss arrangements for use of the present J.J.C. facilities.

The present Junior College will serve as home base for the new college with additional space made available by the public library and Memorial Hall until a new campus can be located.

The outcome of the election is the first of many steps to be taken in establishing a four-year college in this area. The plan was spurred on when Governor John M. Dalton vetoed a measure last fall that would have provided a branch of the University of Missouri in Joplin.

Dr. Elmer Ellis, president of the University of Missouri, endorsed the college plan. "I think the county junior college district is an excellent thing. Largely, it makes junior college education available to young people living outside the present school district. It also provides more adequate support for a diversified junior college that can work in terminal vocational education as well as pre-senior college education."

Interest in the election has prompted the Missouri Commission on Higher Education to make an independent study to consider whether the needs of Southwest Missouri are great enough to establish a four-year institution.

First established in 1937, the College is a member of the American Association of Junior Colleges and accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The present enrollment is over 1,000 and an increase is expected.

Students May Take Civil Service Exams

Now available to JJC students is a new service being offered by the business faculty of the College for the Civil Service examinations in shorthand and/or typing. A student may on request be given the examinations, which will be honored by the United States Civil Service Commission, according to Miss Dorothy Stone.

On completion of the tests students will be rated and given a Certificate of Proficiency.

Shakespeare's 400th Birthday Observances Take Many Forms

A listening room will provide Joplin Junior College students an opportunity of hearing Shakespearean works next week. This month the College has joined in the worldwide observance of William Shakespeare's four-hundredth birthday. Throughout 1964, colleges, universities, summer theaters, and other organizations will especially honor the poet-playwright born April 23, 1564.

Each period throughout the week English Literature students will be in charge of the Shakespearean listening room, 200, a transformed English office. Seven or eight of Shakespeare's plays and some short poems will be available.

Displays have been set up honoring Shakespeare in the showcases on the first and second floors and in Room 308. The main exhibit is on the second floor. Of special interest are the playbills from Stratford-upon-Avon and theaters around the world. Rare editions of Shakespeare's works, a map of Stratford, and postcards depicting scenes of Shakespeare's birthplace, and his mother's home highlight the exhibit. In addition, the displays contain antique decorative plates picturing the church in which Shakespeare was christened and buried and the garden at New Place, his last home. One Royal Doulton plate pictures Shakespeare surrounded by his familiar characters. Ceramic tiles portraying Anne Hathaway's home and a silver spoon molded in the form of Shakespeare's head are included in the display.

A model of the original Globe Theater, constructed and given to the College by a student in night school, may be viewed in the display case on the first floor. One of Milton Brietzke's students fashioned authentic costumes for figures on the miniature stage. Masks resembling the tragic and

Placement Tests To Be Given Here

Joplin Junior College in cooperation with the State of Missouri College placement testing program will administer placement tests to students who this fall will be entering either Joplin Junior College or any other Missouri college in this program, including the University of Missouri.

Dr. Lloyd L. Dryer, director of guidance here, announced the tests will be given on this campus on April 25 and on May 9, beginning at 8:30 a.m. There is no charge.

According to Dr. Dryer, these tests are required of all students entering any one of the member institutions. By taking the tests early, the student saves time and effort that would be exerted were he to wait until the day of registration and take the tests.

C.P.A. Society Presents Check To Juco Student

The Southwest Chapter of the Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants gave a $100 check to an outstanding sophomore accounting student who plans to continue public accounting training next fall and aspires to become a C.P.A.

The gift was presented to Don Kellhofer by Don Clarkson, a C.P.A., representing the Committee on Public Relations from the Society.

Who Is North Central?

An accrediting team from the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will visit our college Monday and Tuesday. The purpose of their visit is to determine whether or not the regional association will continue to accredit Joplin Junior College. The examination is routine procedure. Ordinarily a committee revisits each accredited college every 10 years. Since 1949, Joplin Junior College has been accredited by this national agency.

A few weeks ago the faculty submitted reports on practically all phases of work at the College. While the committee is here, they will verify reports, probably visit classes, and question students.

Being accredited by North Central means that credits of J.J.C. students are acceptable at any other institution accredited by North Central and at colleges accredited by one of the other four regional associations in the United States. Many colleges are not accredited by this national accrediting network and we should be very proud that our College is a member.

Our Reflections

All eyes turn and those present stare with awe as a creature swishes past in the hall. "What," you say, "is the cause for wonder?" It is merely one of our beautiful Juco students dressed in the enduring fashion of hemline above the knee. Even though leading fashion designers have lengthened the hemline to fall below the knee, still the short skirt version persists at Juco. Once started, this trend seemed to spread as a disease, affecting too many students and causing unusual problems to cure it. Many students tend to follow the crowd and assume that the clothing worn by everyone else is appropriate for them, also.

We should consider our own figure type and choose dress flattering to this type. When we observe the ten best-dressed women in the world, we see no extremes in dress or hairdos. Each wears clothes which are suited to her frame and shape of face. She also remembers the appropriate time and place for different types of clothing.

It seems that the only solution to the problem of dress is to consider the type and color of clothes best suited to the personality we wish to reflect. We should strive for neatness and choose simple clothes in good taste. If we follow this basic formula, we will reflect ourselves at our best. — V.L.W.

Business Major Extols Juco

As Sharon McClellan ends her sophomore year at J.J.C. she says of the College, "I have been quite pleased with my teachers and the courses offered here. I think that they provide excellent preparation for work in a four-year college."

Sharon participates in several activities. She is president of Pi Alpha Pi and of Y.W.C.A. The business major became a member of Pi Alpha Pi her first semester with a grade point average of 2.2. She displays her musical talent as a flutist in the Civic Symphony and the Pit Orchestra.

Besides maintaining a high grade point average and participating in College activities, Sharon serves as Dean of the Grand Cross of the Color, a high branch of the Order of the Rainbow for Girls. In her spare time, she enjoys bowling, tennis, and reading. This summer she plans to work at Empire District.

As a business major, Sharon attended her first year at Joplin Junior College on a scholarship from the Webb City Business and Professional Women's Club. When asked why she chose business, she explains: "I first became interested in business when I began work at the Webb City Public Library. I also worked in the office in high school and liked it very much. There are so many opportunities in the field." The sophomore declares that her second love is English.

Sharon appreciatively says of her former teacher, Miss Vera Steiniger: "She was quite an influence on my education. She gave me a boost when I needed it."

Players to Attend SMS Production

Joplin College Players will attend the Southwest Missouri State College presentation of "South Pacific" tonight in Springfield.

Students Comment On Writers' Talks

The recent visit of Mrs. Hughie Call and Mrs. Peggy Simpson Curry to Joplin Junior College was warmly received by students who attended their sessions for aspiring writers. Members of writers' groups in Joplin and Springfield and other area visitors also attended the conference, sponsored by the English department.

Student comments ran as follows:

"Mrs. Call's virtue lay in her humble friendliness and her willingness to advise those needing help."

"As the result of Mrs. Curry's talk I now realize that even I have something to write about."

Many have contributed to the exhibits but, primarily, the material has come from private collections of English and speech instructors, three of whom have been in England. A few students and the librarian have also contributed.

Several teachers plan special observances. Duane Hunt will teach "Romeo and Juliet" to combined classes in the Little Theater. Mrs. Ruby Wiley plans to give students an opportunity to copy favorite Shakespeare quotations which will be posted on the bulletin board. Miss Lela Smith and Milton Brietzke plan to have students respond to roll call each day with a Shakespearean quotation, no two of which can be alike. The drama instructor also intends to take students to Kansas City to see "Julius Caesar." Miss Cleettis Headlee plans to discuss Stratford-upon-Avon in her classes, including the Shakespearean Institute. She will possibly show slides of the area.

Milton Brietzke and Duane Hunt arranged most of the exhibits, and Instructor Arthur Boles did all captions and lettering.

Former Student Speaks on Accounting At K.S.C. Career Day

Among the guest speakers talking on various fields of accounting was a former J.J.C. student, Donald Schaefer, C.P.A.

Those in attendance were Kay Alley, Tom Harvell, Don Kellhofer, Jerry Lehr, and Miss Dorothy Stone, accounting instructor.

Delegates Report On Recent Convention

The eight students that represented Cuba in the general meetings of the Midwest Model United Nations report that they met with 79 delegations from 20 different states. The various events included three plenary sessions, a dedication to John F. Kennedy, and a delegates banquet which featured Harlan Cleveland, Associate Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, as the guest speaker.

Lloyd Buehner III worked in the Political and Security Committee; Sallie Haynes in the Special Political Committee; Karen Faust in the Economic and Financial Committee; Barbara Stone in the Social, Humanitarian, and Cultural Committee; and Pat Taylor in the Trusteeship Committee. Robert Howard, Millie Blankenship, and Patricia Smith also participated in various sessions.

Many large state universities and such institutions as Grinnell, Cornell, and Notre Dame sent delegates to the convention. Mrs. Julie Hughes who accompanied the students said, "The competition was stiff because many universities restricted their participants to juniors and seniors. A great number of these were graduate students in law and political science."

Harry C. Gockel of the social science department also accompanied the students on the trip.

Stage Band Prepares for Festival

The Stage Band is preparing for the Oread Jazz Festival to be held April 25 at the University of Kansas in Lawrence and also giving several concerts. The band is now one of 10 competing for a European tour this summer.

Director Russell Benzamin says that the greater number of musical arrangements being rehearsed are written by Johnny Richards and Ralph Mutchler, famed writers for the Stan Kenton band. A new version of "This Can't be Love," arranged by Benzamin, will also be presented.

After successfully auditioning for the festival in February, the group was asked to perform at several district schools. South Junior High warmly received the band in March, and they played at North Junior High this morning. In addition to the new musical numbers, the band was requested to play, "Introducing the Band," a number in which each section of the band is presented to the audience, and "Bubbly Music," a comical spoof on the famous TV orchestra of Lawrence Welk.

Isometrics Exercise and Entertain

Some people probably have wondered if only two days of gym exercises per week do any significant good toward improving a person's physical condition. Perhaps this is what motivated Coach Douglas Landreth and Coach Dudley Stegge to apply some new and different method of exercise at the College. The different method the coaches decided to use is called isometrics.

This program consists of 10 stations or bars at which you do a different exercise for eight to 12 seconds. It is not the objective of the isometrics to make you a Charles Atlas but simply to improve your condition by exercising muscles that you do not ordinarily exercise during the week. Since this is the case, each station or bar has a different objective. For instance, Station 1 is for building and developing leg muscles. Station 2 is for developing neck muscles, and so on.

Several students have commented on the isometrics, saying that they have benefited from them. Some even work out on them during their free periods. Also a few faculty members share this view after participating in the program. Dr. Lloyd Dryer said that since he has started using the isometrics he has felt much better. Larry Dunham said that he uses the isometrics at least three times a week and Dunham also said that he has certainly enjoyed them although he has not been doing them long enough to do any good.

Isometrics are not new. Most people have used them unwittingly in one form or another many times in their life. The word "isometrics" means "same length." Therefore, this term implies that the muscle remains the same length. In many colleges isometrics is used in conjunction with weight lifting; however, they are not used together here. Although the real success of isometrics will not be told until the end of the semester, one fact does remain: they have proved to be an adequate exerciser and most of all an adequate entertainer.
